

Marriage Matters
Winston T. Smith

Lesson 6 - Conflict Homework

What is your attitude toward conflict?

How might your attitude change if you understand conflict as something God uses to help you?

How are you guilty of the very things that you typically point out to your spouse?

Think about recent conflicts you've had with your spouse.

What did you really want?

What desires do you typically bring to relationships?

How do your desires fuel conflict?

What strategy do you use most in conflict: appeasing, ignoring, or winning?

Why?

Are there particular desires or fears that shape your approach?

Which biblical approach is most difficult for you: yielding, waiting, or confronting? Why?

Can you think of a way you may need to yield lovingly to the needs of your spouse?